Student Engagement and Advocacy

Description: In order to carry out the association's mission, it is crucial to engage student leaders with state policy makers and university administrators and trustees.

This requires research and training with students, and coordination of their involvement in meetings, committees, task forces, and conferences. These activities allow students to represent themselves at the State Capitol in Sacramento, as well as at the CSU Chancellor's Office in Long Beach, among other responsibilities at the 23 CSU campuses in California. Typical expenses include travel and other accommodations, as well as nominal expenses for training materials. As a result of their engagement and involvement in these activities, our students become aware of how public policy is made in California, how to navigate the policy-making process, how to conduct themselves in high-profile meetings and other business settings, and how to return to their campuses and articulate issues and perspectives to their general student populations. It is difficult to accurately determine how many students are served by this program, but the number is in the thousands.

This campaign allows our students to utilize marketing and communications methods to advertise how the CSU supports the state economy via workforce preparation, local economic impact of the 23 campuses, and overall return on investment for what the state allocates in the CSU budget. The campaign included a web site, flyers, tee shirts, buttons, and wrist bands. All items were distributed on campuses and at public events, such as Chamber of Commerce meetings and community events. Overall, this campaign advocates on behalf of 427,000 CSU students. It is executed by our board of directors, which includes 47 students.
